Nonprofit Island Green Living has announced the hiring of Keryn Bryan as manager of the ReSource Depot, St. John's only secondhand store.

St. John's natural beauty and diverse community drew Bryan to the island nearly 40 years ago, and she has called it home ever since.

She is known for her excellent customer service, attention to detail and talented design capabilities, as she has worked in various positions in the hospitality field, including more than 20 years with Connections of St. John Inc. and as proprietor of Graphic Isle Design.

Bryan is deeply committed to the mantra “rethink, reduce, reuse, recycle,” and is passionate about passing these principles on to others, according to an Island Green Living news release. She feels strongly that her position leading the team at the ReSource Depot will help amplify those practices in the community.

“We are excited to welcome Keryn and have already seen impressive strides in the short time she has been with us,” Harith Wickrema, Island Green board president said in the news release. “We are confident that her creativity and business acumen will catapult the ReSource Depot to the next level. Stop by and say hello — and do some holiday shopping while you are at it.”

The ReSource Depot, which has operated for more than a decade, provides a clearinghouse for donated household, clothing, building and other materials that would otherwise waste away in the landfill, extending the life cycle of these items while selling them at affordable prices to the community.

To date, more than a million pounds of material have been given a new lease on life, according to Island Green Living. The funds raised from sales help to support the nonprofit’s sustainable initiatives.

The store is also accepting donations of household items, furniture, appliances in working condition, tools and salvaged construction materials.

The ReSource Depot is open from 9 a.m. to 2 p.m. Tuesday through Saturday. For more information call 340-473-7870.
